

MEXICAN PLOT IS EXPOSED BY BAKER

investigation. As it is stated, there is no evidence against any individual to warrant his arrest. Attorney General Gregory indicated tonight that such information has been laid before him with a view of vague and inconclusive character.

While administration officers generally declined to discuss Secretary Baker's warning, it was admitted that the information received does not give any clear indication of either the time or place of the proposed attack. Mr. Baker, it was suggested, probably acted on the theory that publication of the fact that the American military authorities had been warned might prevent it altogether. He conferred during the day with Secretary Lansing and other state department officials, Attorney General Gregory, and held long conferences with General Scott and other officers of the war department.

Wild Rumors Rampant
For some days vague intimations that an attack of some sort along the border might be in prospect have been reaching the state department. Up to today they have been so indefinite, it is understood, that officials were not inclined to treat them seriously. There were no clues on which to start an investigation. It has been known for some time also, that Villa, or whoever the bandit chieftain is who has been operating against the Carranza government under that name, has had a considerable supply both of silver money and ammunition, smuggled over the border from the United States. The reference in Secretary Baker's statement to the fact that Mexican bandits are known to have been paid recently in silver is thought to have been founded upon those reports.

Bands Taunt Pershing
A report brought to the border today by Americans arriving from Mexico said the bandits were close to General Pershing's advance posts and had demanded the retirement toward the border and eventual withdrawal of the American troops under penalty of attack. No confirmation was received by the war department up to a late hour.

The nature of the warnings reported sent to General Funston and General Pershing were not disclosed. It is assumed here however, that the war department relies wholly on the discretion of the officers to safeguard their commands and the border towns and hamlets from attack. A more optimistic view of the situation in northern Chihuahua was taken today as the result of reports that the Carranza garrison at Chihuahua City had been reinforced by 8,000 men, and that a formidable campaign against the bandits was about to be launched.

Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican ambassador-designate, when shown Secretary Baker's statement, said he had heard intimations when he returned from Mexico two weeks ago that a border raid plot by intervention interests on both sides of the border was being worked out. He said he had pronounced informed General Carranza who telegraphed in reply that troop movements to prevent such an occurrence had been ordered.

"I understood," Mr. Arredondo added, "that the border attack was planned with the purpose primarily of impeding negotiations of the international commissioners and also presumably to produce some effect in the coming presidential elections both in the United States and in Mexico. I cannot condemn too strongly the activity of these common enemies of both countries. Now that the plans are known, I think they will react directly against the purposes of the plotters."

Mr. Arredondo gave the impression that he had had no recent reports as to the plot. Army officers have been inclined to doubt vague rumors that the bandits might attack Pershing's forces. They believe that the Mexican outlaws would not willingly chance a clash with the troops of the American expedition. The importance of the fact that the bandits are said to have been recently paid in silver rests on the fact that heretofore even Carranza soldiers have been paid in paper money, their daily pay being the equivalent of about four cents American gold. Only the most fortunate families in Mexico, it has been reported, have been able to pay for their supplies with silver coin and if the bandits are now being paid in metal it will seem like wealth for them for which they might be willing to take any risks.

Further reports of the exodus of Mexican families from Mexico to the United States came to the State department today, one dispatch saying that members of Carranza, Obregon, Trevino, Huerta and Madero families were now in San Antonio, Texas, and officials here could not trace the full meaning of what appears to be an unusual desire to get out of Mexico just at this time.

In some quarters it was believed that economic and social conditions were responsible, rather than an impending collapse of the Government and all the disorder that it might bring with it. Officials frankly admitted however, had they had nothing definite on which to found an opinion.

Quiet has been reported at all points recently on the west coast with the exception of one brief outbreak of bandits.

SAVING VICTIMS OF U-53 UNNEUTRAL BRITONS TELL U. S.

(By Review Leased Wire)

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Some utterances of the feeling that activities of American warships in rescuing passengers from the vessels sunk by the German submarine U-53 off the American coast amounted to a breach of neutrality, were made today in the House of Lords by Baron Beresford and Baron Sydenham.

Talk of British Action.

Lord Beresford is recognized by the country as spokesman for the navy in the House of Lords. Similar opinions have been expressed by some of the newspapers and public men, as well as by naval officers, and the matter was brought up for discussion today by requests for information from Viscount Grey, secretary for foreign affairs, regarding the American policy and possible action by the British government.

Grey Approves U. S.

Viscount Grey's reply was that the matter was one between the American government and Germany. While stating that the British government was not yet informed as to whether any acts of the U-53 constituted a breach of the German promise to President Wilson, he declared that German submarines had committed violations of that pledge in other waters many times.

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The activities of the German submarine U-53 near the American coast and the general question of the relations of the United States to submarine warfare are matters to be considered between the American and German governments, said Foreign Secretary Grey, in the House of Lords today. He deprecated discussion of the question and said it was for the American government to decide the policy and action required by the circumstances of the case.

Baron Beresford said the action of American ships did not appear to be quite within the bonds of neutrality and thought the British were bound to take notice of this fact.

The submarine question was brought forward by Lord Sydenham, who asked if the details of the sinking of the British steamer "Elephanto" and the others had been received and whether the circumstances were in accordance with the German pledge to the United States. He referred to the "activities of the U-53 under the very eyes of the American navy" and the declaration of President Wilson which had resulted in the German pledge. Lord Sydenham declared:

"Even before the exploits of the U-53 that pledge was torn to shreds. Yet the government of the United States had made no sign whatever that the sinking of neutral ships goes on almost every day. The Norwegians have lost 18 vessels in this one month, and what must small neutrals think of their powerful representative?"

No life, he said, was lost because of the presence of American warships. Lord Sydenham took the position that the presence of American warships actually enabled Germany to defy what he said President Wilson had described as a sacred and indisputable rule of international law.

Baron Beresford expressed the opinion that Germany intended to bring America into the war so as to be able to say she could not fight the whole world and also because the United States would be a valuable asset to her at the peace conference.

also the increase in general prosperity in the state during his administration. Governor Hunt denied that he was the tool of the Western Federation of Miners and declared that he was the "servant and agent of the whole people of the state of Arizona and not to any one set or section of citizenship."

He denied that he was here to stir up strife, saying he favored neither labor nor capital in his official acts nor his feelings and was merely striving to carry out the laws of Arizona woe for rich or poor, alike.

Governor Hunt was frequently interrupted by prolonged applause and when he completed his address the ovation given him was greater than any yet seen or heard in the Warren District.

Osborn introduced Sidney P. Osborn, candidate for reelection as secretary of state, was the next speaker and briefly told the appreciative audience of the return which had been accomplished under the Democratic administration. He cited statistics from the records in his own office to prove his contentions. His talk was greeted by spontaneous applause by the crowd.

Howe On Taxation Charles R. Howe, candidate for reelection to the state tax commission, was the next speaker and devoted his entire talk to a discussion of the taxation problems now before the state. He told of the work of the commission since its formation and of the work now before it and of the efforts of the body to equalize the taxation in the state.

Hayden's Ovation Carl Hayden's appearance was the incentive for an ovation and the Arizona Congressmen entertained and instructed his hearers in Democratic lore for thirty minutes, never once losing the thread of his argument nor the interest of his audience.

Hayden is a member of the public lands committee, the committee on the irrigation of arid lands and the committee on Indian affairs. He told of the work he has accomplished for the good of the state on these three committees, and of the general good that had come from legislation fostered by the members of these three committees in the lower house of congress.

The congressman then launched into a discussion of national issues, taking up in turn the eight measures passed by congress and particularly the Adamson bill, which he characterized as a bill without a political aspect and which would solve a most vexatious problem in the country and which, at the time of its passage, prevented the most disastrous railroad strike which had ever threatened the United States.

Hayden then spoke of the revision of the tariff and of the provision in the recent revenue bill to create a non-partisan tariff board which will take the question out of politics. He detailed the Federal Reserve Act, the Federal Farm Loan Bill, the Good Roads Bill, the Shipping Bill and the preparedness measures.

The speaker declared his opposition to conscription in times of peace and explained the provision, contained in the army reorganization bill, which enables the draft of men into reserve battalions of regiments. The congressman told his audience that he got the idea from the state of Arizona which included such a provision in its statutes passed since statehood. In speaking of the suffrage movement Hayden declared that the actions of the Democratic party proved beyond doubt which party had always been the friend of the suffrage movement in the country. He deplored the tactics of the so-called Women's Party, which he added was nothing but the Congressional Union for Women's suffrage and declared that he couldn't conceive of the women of Arizona being deceived by the campaign.

Congressman Hayden, at the conclusion of his address, met with instant and continuous applause. Today the entire party goes to Douglas where a big rally is scheduled for this evening. Saturday the party goes to Tombstone and Sunday the speakers will address a Bisbee audience at the City Park.
